Dr. Sheetal Kapoor

December 24th is a landmark day in the history of consumer movement in India as on this day the Consumer Protection Act, 1986 came into existence. The Consumer Protection Act, 1986 was enacted by the Parliament to protect the interests of consumers against standard products, increased prices through market manipulation, failed warranties, poor after sales service and unfair trade practices. It is a progressive and comprehensive piece of legislation covering all goods and services. Thus, 24th December is observed as National Consumer Day all over India. Consumer Protection Act (CPA) is considered as a benevolent social legislation for protecting consumers from the malpractices of the manufacturers. In order to meet the changing requirements of consumers in the emerging market environment the Act has been amended a number of times with the last amendment in 2002, providing more laws to cut down delays in disposal of cases by the Consumer Forums.

Markets can operate efficiently only when consumers are aware. Competitive markets require having information symmetry. Consumers should be vigilant and well informed about the costs and benefits of each transaction they undertake in the market place to enable greater efficiency of markets. Where the maximum consumers are aware and well informed, markets function more efficiently and competitive forces become sharp and have greater play thereby benefiting consumers. Errant members of the trade and industry are also warned that the law provides for legal action by aggrieved consumers and it may be more profitable to give consumers a fair deal than exploit them. In the present day, where every manufacturer is trying to maximise profits by resorting to aggressive and misleading advertisements and business practices involving use of unfair and restrictive trade there is an imperative need to build powerful, broad based consumer movement in the country.

The level of awareness is raised and both rural and urban consumers become aware of their rights and responsibilities, pressure will automatically be on service providers to market quality goods and services at affordable prices. They will also then hesitate to indulge in unfair and restrictive trade practices.

Thus, the consumer or ‘Grahak’ in Hindi plays an important role in the economic system of a country. Without consumer demand, manufacturers would lack one of the key motivations to produce, and to sell to consumers. Many times consumers are equated to Gods in India. We come across statements written in many shops as “Consumer is King”, “Consumer is Always Right”, “Grahak Devo Bhava”.

Mahatma Gandhi also mentioned about the importance of consumers in market. “A customer is the most important visitor on our premises. He is not dependent on us. We are dependent on him. He is not an interruption in our work - he is the reason for being there. We are not doing him a favour by serving him. He is doing us a favour by giving us the opportunity to serve him.”

The field of aerospace engineering is a highly technical and demanding field. The design and development of aircraft and related systems is a highly technical field and requires highly trained engineers, scientists and technicians. The design and manufacture of aircraft, spacecraft, and related systems is a highly technical field and requires highly trained engineers, scientists, and technicians.

Aerospace engineering is a broad term that encompasses the design and development of aircraft, spacecraft, and related systems. It covers a wide range of engineering disciplines, including aeronautics, electronics, computer science, robotics, meteorology, chemistry, and physics. Aerospace engineering is typically divided into two branches: Aeronautical Engineering and Astronautical Engineering.

Aeronautical Engineering focuses on the development of aircraft and spacecraft for commercial or military use. It involves the design and development of engines, propulsion systems, aerodynamics, flight control systems, and avionics. Astronautical Engineering, on the other hand, focuses on the development of spacecraft for space exploration.

(III) Causes of Water Pollution

Every year world water day is celebrated on 22 March. But except observing some rituals we hardly take any concrete measure. Actually 80% of water bodies in the world are highly polluted with the plastic. The plastic waste in Delhi is also worse. Though there are 1000+ water bodies recorded in recorded in several states of India, only 20% of these exist only on paper-ennounced by parks, school and hospitals. There are 200+ drains and dumping sites and sewages created. About 20% of Delhi’s population is living on drinking water. In 2012, MDG ICT: Water samples were taken at the rate of 100: 1 tolls in cities/towns in the Ganga basin. It is learnt that most of state govs have not cooperated with central govt while passing through Delhi. There are 21 major wastewater drains in NCT Delhi-of these 18 drains in the Yamuna. Further, it is learnt that 60% of these exist only on paper. In India (1981-2012) population is not getting safe drinking water. In 2012, MCD got water samples with pH value of 5.70. (UCIL) has an operating uranium mine since 1967 extracting about 1000 tons of uranium ore daily, accounting for 20% of raw material for India’s nuclear power generation. Aditya Leven researched there and reported (Times of India, 15 December, 2015) that this mining has exposed workers in particular touranium sulfo- nates and radiocaesium in toluene. In addition, even rainwater is becoming highly acidic due to rainwater in the atmospheric mixing with polluting gases like oxides of sulfur and nitrogen emitted from power plants, automobile and other industrial units. Analysis of rainwater samples from Nagpur, Mohan- bari (Assam), Allahabad, Varanasi (M.D.U) and two Kodimanganj (Kanpur) (2001-2012) showed a pH level ranging from 4.7 to 5.2. Rainwater from Dhobi ghat (rain- water with pH below 5.65 is con- sidered acidic). This may be seen in Table 5 below.

The Consumer Protection Act, 1986 has defined the term consumer through 'goods' and 'services'. According to Section 2(1)(d) of The Consumer Protection Act, 1986 'Consumer' means any person who:

1. receives or avails of such goods for a consideration which has been paid or promised or partly paid and partly promised, or under any system of deferred payment and includes a person who obtains such goods for resale or for any commercial purpose; or
2. receives or avails of such services for a consideration which has been paid or promised or partly paid and partly promised, or under any system of deferred payment, and includes any user of such goods or services other than the person who purchases such goods or services for resale or for any commercial purpose.

The protection of the six rights of consumers are being ensured. They are right to safety, information, choice, representation, redressal and consumer education, and provides for a simple, speedy and inexpensive redressal to the consumers in the nature of compensation and also awards compensation, wherever appropriate, to the consumer for any damage or loss suffered due to defective goods or services or due to any breach of contract. For compensation, the consumer can seek redressal against any defective goods purchased or service provided and the person or persons responsible for the defects are made liable. The consumer can also get all the details about the product. Keeping into account the growing digital market in India and the asymmetry of customer segments in India a New Consumer Protection Act, 2016 is likely to be passed by the Parliament soon. It is hoped that the Consumer Protection Act would overcome the shortcomings of the existing law and it would give a big boost to the consumer movement.

The Consumer Protection Act, 1986 (CPAct) was enacted in the year 1986 as a result of the recommendation of the Working Group established in 1982 and approved the revised UNGCP 2015. India had actively participated in the process of revision of the UNGCP in 2015 and emphasized on having an over-arching instrument that has been set up in the form of the Intergovernmental Group of Experts on Consumer Protection (IGE). The IGE had 95 of the revised UNGCP 2015. All the member states are de- manding to adopt the IGE. The first session of the Intergovernmental Group of Experts on Consumer Protection was held at the Palais des Nations in Geneva on 17 and 18 October 2016 under the presidency of UNCTAD. Representatives from 66 countries and 5 intergovernmental organizations, including the heads of competition and consumer protection authorities, attended the high-level discussions in the meeting. The Intergovernmental Group of Experts on Consumer Protection was established by the United Nations Commission for Trade and Development (UNCTAD) as a result of the adoption of Recommendation 54 of the Twelfth UNCTAD Conference in Colombo, Sri Lanka, on 17 September 1978.

The protection of the six rights of consumers are being ensured. They are right to safety, information, choice, representation, redressal and consumer education, and provides for a simple, speedy and inexpensive redressal to the consumers in the nature of compensation. Thus, the CPAct 1986 and the revised UNGCP 2015 has been enacted on 25 December 2015. A series of Consumer Protection Acts is being enacted in the major countries of the world. India has adopted the UNGCP 2015 due to its liberal nature and mutual understanding, as well as the development of appropriate strategies to improve consumer protection.

The basic reasons for the birth of the consumer movement in India are:

a) Rampant food shortages,

b) Black marketing of essential commodities

c) The consumer movement by the Indian government was the enactment of the Consumer Protection Act, 1986. The enactment of the CPAct 1986 has been noted as one of the most significant events in the history of consumerism. The CPAct 1986 empowers the people to form consumer organizations and protect their interests.
